THE publishers of Dr. ROWLEY's WORKS, E. NEWBERRY, the corner of Ludgate-street, and J. HAND, Little Newport-street, Leicester-square, most respectfully inform the Nobility, Gentry, Faculty, and others, that they have printed and published a new edition, in four handsome volumes, of that Physician's Rational and Improved Theory and Practice of Physic, with several new productions and Improvements that have never before appeared, with some hundreds of prescriptions, &c.

There have been numerous and continual applications for Dr. ROWLEY's TREATISES, on Female, Nervous, Bilious, Hypochondriac, Convulsive, Spasmodic, Lethargic, Apoplectic, and Paralytic Diseases, Madness, and Suicide, &c. &c. since those, and other works of the Doctor, have been out of print. It has been determined by the present publishers to make those Medical Improvements as universally beneficial as possible; but they have been obliged, by various delays, to postpone the public introduction of this complete edition to the present moment.

As it is impossible to know the noble personages, faculty, gentry, and others, who have made repeated applications for Dr. ROWLEY's WORKS, and who have been, from time to time, disappointed; they could not conceive a more eligible plan than the present for making known this publication, which they presume will not only be found to be well worthy of the study and perusal of the faculty, who are unacquainted with Dr. ROWLEY's Important Physical and Surgical Discoveries and various Improvements, but likewise it will be a valuable acquisition to every nobleman's and gentleman's library, as the works are acknowledged to contain many curious and philosophical enquiries, investigations, and useful demonstrations, hitherto unknown in the medical profession, and may, therefore, become an useful medical instructor for every contemplative and philosophic mind; and the Treatises on Female and Hysteric Diseases, are particularly recommended to the Ladies, as giving the most important instruction for preventing and curing their complaints.

In order to give a concise, though inadequate idea of the nature and extent of the Rational and Improved Practice of Physic, the publishers have printed the General Preface to the whole works, and an abridged Conspectus, which may be had gratis by applying as above.

The principal objects in these Volumes are :

I. To abolish all narrow systems in the practice of Medicine, and to introduce methods of healing diseases according to the various constitutions observable in nature: as the Florid, the Pallid, the Robust, the Debilitated, the Corpulent, and Thin, the very Nervous and Irritable, and the less Irritable, the delicate and valetudinarians, &c.

II. Most of the propositions for such practices have been drawn from the appearances of human bodies after death, and by inductive reasoning, the causes of disease in life, and how they should be more rationally treated, are pointed out, on many new and demonstrative principles.

III. To save the lives of mankind by preventive methods, when Putrid Infectious Diseases, as the Ulcerated Sore Throat, Scarlet Fever, Yellow Fever, &c. reigns in families, cities, towns, &c. It is proved that in all the Hospitals in Europe, 70 die in 100 of putrid diseases; but by Dr. ROWLEY's new mode of treatment not above 6 in 100, as hath been shewn at the St. Mary-le-bone Infirmary. How the horrid accidents from the bite of dogs supposed to be mad, may be certainly cured, &c.
